URGENT HEALTH SERVICE TASKS
IN LABOR HYGIENE AND OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES

Dr Mita Savicevic
Belgrade

1. An accurate picture of the number of occupational disease incidences in individual branches of industry, important mining areas and industrial undertakings must be obtained by using scientific uniform methods.
2. On this basis, and in consideration of the personnel and material available now and in the near future, complete, uniform maximum and minimum plans for creating healthy working conditions must be worked out.
3. The Department of Labor Hygiene of the Union Hygiene Institute and, as far as possible, similar departments in major hygiene institutions of the republics must be equipped as practical scientific bases for solving all the problems occurring in the work of sanitary inspection, and also as schools for improving the qualification and prequalification of higher and intermediate medical personnel.
4. Educational aids, instructions, and other propaganda material in the field of labor hygiene must be produced.
5. The standard of labor hygiene instruction in all intermediate specialist schools must be improved.
